Nijmegen team marches close to memory

Retired sergeant, base neighbour once visited old friend in overseas cemetery

Allen Lathem has likely watched dozens of marching 14 Wing Greenwood soldiers go past the end of his South Greenwood driveway over the past 40 years, training their way to the Nijmegen military marching challenge.

He's been there himself, but more for the memory than putting in those miles.

Lathem, is a retired sergeant, now 92 years old. He joined the air force in 1943, leaving the tiny Seal Harbour village in Guysborough County for the recruitment office in Halifax. He was 17, and had to have his father's permission; it was his first time in Halifax.

"My dad was a fisherman, and I got seasick every time I went out. I knew I wanted the air force: in those days, they'd take you for anything. Everyone else was joining."

Lathem joined the air traffic control trade, heading to Lachine, Quebec, for initial training, and then sent to Charlottetown to work at one of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan airfields. He never intended to fly – "I was damned lucky to be on the ground! I remember the Ansons were out on the field, and a pilot walked into a prop. I was one of the pallbearers: people get killed in this job, and that woke us all up."

Lathem worked at Summerside in operations and the air traffic control tower, and then headed "overseas" to Newfoundland, at that point not a part of Canada.

"I thought that was great – until I realized it was Gander, 1945 and wintertime!"

The war ended about eight months later, and Lathem ended up working in search and rescue in Halifax: back in a boat, seasick again; so he got out of the service in 1946. In 1947, he signed back in, and spent the next 33 years and 240 days in air traffic control. He was stationed in Greenwood seven different times, posted across Canada and, in 1960, he and his wife, Marion (they've

May 30, just after 1 p.m., a 14 Wing Greenwood Hercules with 413 (Transport and Rescue) Squadron was tasked by the Joint Rescue Coordination Centre in Halifax to provide top cover for a 103 Squadron Cormorant conducting a maritime medevac 120 nautical miles northeast of Nain, Labrador. The Hercules refuelled in Goose Bay around 6 p.m., continued to the scene and returned post-mission to 14 Wing just after 10 p.m.

June 1, around 1:30 p.m., a 413 Squadron Cormorant was tasked to assist in the search for a missing person. The individual was located just after 3 p.m., with the body recovered by boat.

June 1, three fishermen were reported overdue in their 18-foot outboard motor boat, near Five Islands. A Cormorant was airborne about 10:30 p.m., but the individuals were located by another boat also involved in the search. The boat had experienced an engine failure. Everyone was brought to shore in good condition. The helicopter returned to Greenwood just before midnight.

now been married 62 years, after meeting while she was a school teacher back in Seal Harbour), were posted for four years to Metz, France, with 1 Air Division. He worked along the war-era Maginot line, controlling heavy radar and aircraft from old bunkers as they travelled between several French and German bases.

While there, he took the family on a vacation to Nijmegen, with one thought: track down an old buddy, Neil Sponagle, from Coddles Harbour, Guysborough County.

"I knew his parents before he went overseas, and I'd found out he'd been killed about a week before the war ended. He was an engineer, building bridges, and he was guarding this bridge for the Canadians to cross. It was bombed and he was killed. He was buried over there."

Lathem found Sponagle's grave in the Nijmegen cemetery: "Graveyards – I don't know how people have room to live there, there are so many graveyards. When we came back in 1964, I went down to visit his parents, and

I had the pictures of his stone and grave. And those cemeteries – there's not necessarily a body there, that's the sad part. But there are crosses there for everyone they know of, and rose bushes on every grave. Immaculate."

Taking a turn at the end of his driveway a few days ago, Lathem was overtaken by the 2018 14 Wing Greenwood marching team. He asked them if they were headed to Nijmegen, and he told them, "I was there."

"That's not an easy march, you need good socks and shoes and the blisters still show up; but it's professional pride. I told them I'd been there to visit a chap I knew from down my way."

Facilitator, fixer | 14 Wing captain takes on aide-de-camp role

Sara White,
Managing editor

Captain Shawn Dyer’s role is to look for potential problems, and smooth them away as Nova Scotia’s lieutenant-governor, His Honour The Honourable Arthur J. LeBlanc, ONS, QC; hosts or arrives as a guest at the many ceremonial events including a Crown representative.

Dyer, executive assistant to 14 Wing Greenwood Commander Colonel Mike Adamson, began volunteer honorary aide-de-camp duties with the lieutenant-governor earlier this spring.

“I love my job as the wing commander’s EA, and working with Colonel Adamson and the wing chief and his assistants – I’m learning a tonne,” Dyer says. “The aide-de-camp role looked interesting, and it’s been really amazing. I’m meeting diverse civilians and business and military people.”

Now in a pool of about 30 trained aides-de-camp, Dyer meets with representative RCMP and police forces, Navy and Army members and St. John Ambulance officers once a month to look at the calendar of upcoming events. Each aide-de-camp is expected to take the lead on two or three a month.

“Every single event His Honour goes to, he’ll have an aide-de-camp – and he loves going out. I will contact the event organizers to get details, and there is always a recce in advance, even if we’ve been there before. Then I brief His Honour, travel with him and work to keep everything as on time as possible.”

Dyer admits the role often means preparing for things to go “sideways,” but it also respects the effort and planning event organizers have already put into their special occasions, and not take over.

“There are always problems, but I’m there to facilitate – consider parking, escorts, side entrances, arrange drivers, have His Honor’s speech ready. I do my best to keep things on track.”

Dyer has already acted as the aide-de-camp at several cultural and community events. While the role doesn’t tie directly to his training as an aerospace engineer and his Royal Canadian Air Force avionics systems technician trade, there are commonalities.

“As a military member, we

Afternoon entertainment excellence from choir, guests

Wing Commander
Royal Air Force (retired)
David Coward

It was an afternoon of great joy and pleasure June 3, as many had the opportunity to attend the spring concert performed by the Canadian Military Wives Choir of Greenwood, held at St. Mark's Church, Greenwood. Guests, choir members' family and friends enjoyed an excellent program of songs, old and new.

Nineteen members of the choir, several singing solos, were accompanied by Mary Magee and led by musical director Vanessa Moncrieff-Gautier, also a talented clarinetist playing a solo piece. Joining the choir was flutist Samantha Brown of a number, and the afternoon was enhanced by the guest appearance of well-known local singer Chris Palmer, with two popular old numbers and a new piece about to be released with his group, Sonlight.

The military wives' choir is one of several in Canada, following the model from the United Kingdom, where the idea of base choirs originated some years ago and where standards have risen so much, choirs now perform at the national level. The Greenwood choir sang in the fall of 2017 in a Canada-wide military wives' choir ensemble at the Toronto Invictus Games.

June 3's show was excellent, as evidenced from the audience acclaim, albeit not to a full church. It was well worth attending, as the ladies and guests put in time and effort to produce such high quality entertainment.

Thunder Midgets hold Apple Cup banner for home rink

The Valley Thunder Lacrosse Midgets kept one of four banners up for grabs at the club-hosted 5th Apple Cup, following an exciting 4-2 final June 3 against the provincial female Midget team.

Four Valley Thunder teams entered each of Novice, Pee-wee, Bantam and Midget divisions in the 17-team, three day, two-rink, 250-plus athlete tournament. Twenty-nine games were played between the Credit Union Centre in Kingston and the Kings Mutual Century Centre in Berwick June 1, 2 and 3.

Four teams played in the Novice division: Valley Thunder, the Sackville Wolves, Eastern Shore Breakers and the St. Margaret's Bay Storm. The final ended 9-5 for Eastern Shore over Sackville, following a wicked comeback mid-game by the Breakers.

Eight teams filled a busy Pee-wee draw: the Dartmouth Bandits, the Codiac Storm Lightning, the Codiac Storm Rock, the St. Margaret's Bay Storm, Valley Thunder, the Dartmouth Bandits A, the Eastern Shore Breakers and the Dartmouth Bandits Bantam Female team. The Bandits A won over the Codiac Lightning 5-3, with a real battle for 7th and 8th spot, between Valley and the Rock, earlier that morning as the nail-biter for local fans: a tie, an overtime and a series of shootouts to see Valley take the win.

In the Bantam division, Valley Thunder met the Team N.S. Bantam Females twice Saturday, with the banner to the winner of the most combined periods; or, if needed, the most goals; or, if needed, the least penalties. It turned out all determinations were needed, with Team N.S. coming out with the fewest penalty minutes.

Valley Thunder, the Team N.S. Midget Females and the Cape Breton Warriors met in the Midget division, with Team N.S. defeating both Valley and CB to advance directly to the final. Valley and Cape Breton met twice more Saturday to place the second team into the final: Valley. The last game of the tournament was the Sunday match between

Hams set for field day radio challenge

All year long, amateur radio “hams” enjoy their hobby, conversing with each other from points all over the world. Hams also provide communications for marathons, equestrian events, walk-a-thons, off-road car races and adventure challenges; and, they help with backup communications for emergency measures organizations in times of need.

Field Day happens once a year, when amateur radio operators gather locally to set up their equipment and communicate throughout the U.S.A. and Canada on the fourth weekend of June. The day is the single most popular on-the-air event, sponsored by the American Radio Relay League and the Radio Amateurs of Canada. It is a chance for hams to practice for emergency events, setting up radios to provide communications when disaster strikes. This is done “in the field,” without the use of commercial power. It is also a great chance for families, friends and visitors to see hams in action. With more than 170,000 licensed hams in North America, there are more than 35,000 who “get on the air” during Field Day.

Everyone is welcome to come out to the Greenwood Amateur Radio Club's local event. Feel free to see hams in action through their 24-hour operation at the Wilmot Community Centre, 13972 Highway 1, Wilmot; from 3 p.m. June 23 to 3 p.m. June 24. For information, contact Phil Hunter at 902-309-1504. If you can't make it to the Greenwood club's event, the Kings County Club holds its event at the water tower on Collins Road in Port Williams. Contact Wayne Blenkhorn at 902-542-7141.
